Presented by
MOBILE WORKFORCE MANAGEMENT STRATEGYSM

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) reports that in 2000, motor vehicle crashes accounted for 41,821 deaths and 3,189,000 injuries in the United States.

In 2002, one fourth (1,372) of all worker fatalities were caused by vehicle accidents.

Motor vehicle accidents are the leading cause of all work fatalities.

The NHTSA estimates that 20 to 30 percent of crashes are caused by distracted drivers.

Statistics do not lie. Distracted drivers are a major concern for all users of the roads and for their employers. This course explores the many distractions drivers are faced with and promotes strategies to allow drivers to make safe decisions that will help keep their attention with their primary task of safely driving their vehicle.

Please give your attention to this informative 2-hour classroom presentation.
If you use the streets or roadways of America your loved ones and your employer cannot afford for you to miss this course.
